

I started my career in Journalism and Media in 1996, starting as a freelance journalist, then I got an offer from Aljazeera Net in 30 of May in 2000 in the research department, and then I became the head of the research department in 2002 and by the end of 2008 I shifted to the news Department which I used to share some work with them since I came to Aljazeera Net.

Before shifting to the news department I worked with the research department team for publishing tens of political, historical and intellectual studies, and also we produced many news special coverages. Meanwhile, I used to travel for covering some important events like US invasion to Iraq.

Besides my work in Aljazeera I established with others a media, marketing and consulting company in 2005, and we all worked in film production. And separately, I started give training courses in Several issues related to journalism and media, which held in Qatar, Lebanon, Libya, Egypt and Turkey.

In 2009 I have redeveloped a number of newspapers in Libya, and established a news agency in the city of Tripoli. I continued to work for the development of the media and the journalism in Libya, founded the AJWA news radio and its website in 2012 in Benghazi, and then in 2014 I established ARRAED news channel in Istanbul, Turkey.

I'm writer and analyst focusing on Libyan social and political affairs.
